Course Description

This course provides a study of social changes and social problems. It examines who defines what a social problem is; why some social problems receive much attention, while others are ignored; and what the impacts are of defining social problems in a particular way. The course examines these questions drawing on case studies of contemporary issues, like poverty, inequality, health care, and education policy. It focuses on the following aspects: evidence-based analysis of the dynamics of social change; factors contributing to social problems; proactive and reactive measures in responding to social problems; and case studies of the dynamics of social change and social problems in Thailand and other countries.
