Course Description

This class provides an overview of various legal issues surrounding corporations. Aspects of legal issues in business management are examined. Actual cases and related video clips may be used to stimulate class discussions. Due to the market failure that the world economy is experiencing now, governments around the world are tightening their grips on corporations through numerous regulatory schemes. The course discusses regulatory issues which restrict or promote today's corporate activities and analyzes and discusses cases in relation to current viewpoints. Because this class covers a wide range of legal issues, student participation is strongly encouraged, and class participation contributes to as much as 40% of the total grade.
