Course Description

This course teaches literary prose fiction for adults, but writers are also given the chance to opt for non-fiction, drama, or poetry. Neither fiction for children nor genre fiction feature in the course. This course stresses process writing, rewriting and editing as essential to the crafting and sculpting of fine sentences and paragraphs. To this end students read their prose, poetry and drama in writers' workshops. Students explore issues of lexis, syntax, character, setting, and point of view before embarking on fully-fledged prose excursions. The instructor helps to shape and polish that prose works with students to develop their talents.
