Course Description
This course examines René Descartes' MEDITATION ON FIRST PHILOSOPHY, providing a comprehensive picture of Descartes' philosophical system, and an introduction to several of the fundamental problems of philosophy. The course also explores the writings of contemporary philosophers to study problems including the problem of knowledge (what can one know, and how?); the mind-body problem (how is one's mind related to one's body? Is the mind distinct from the body, or are people merely a physical organism of an especially complex type?); and the problem of freedom and determinism.
