Course Description
This course focuses on names as a means of marking out the socio-cultural identity of the named and of the namer. The course examines anthroponyms (personal names), toponyms (place names) and commercial names. The course is interdisciplinary in nature and combines a range of approaches to names. Linguistic and philosophical approaches provide the theoretical anchor to the topic of names. Subsequent seminars provide context to names in their historical, geographical, political and literary contexts. Students can pursue their own interests in the mini project.
