Course Description

This course explores the important roles media play in our everyday life, and considers a wide range of issues, including (but are not limited to):
How do we incorporate various forms of media into our daily lives?
How does media influence our perceptions of ourselves, others, and society?
What is so “new” about “new media”?
What is so “social” about social media?
Why does media matter?

This course provides an opportunity to reflect critically on one's media use, and helps them investigate the relationships between media, individuals, and society.
