Course Description
This course acquaints students with the theory and practice of modern western poetry. It introduces students to a view on poetry in terms of Wittgenstein's family resemblance, in the sense that poetry is made up by formal features that practices share in different combinations. Students are provided with analytical tools for studying different poetry practices, not only in literary, but also in ritualistic, religious, or other relevant contexts. Students are required to present their own case studies of poetry practices.
