Course Description

This course explores how the State, private sector, and civil society are three key entities for understanding urban development. It examines the relationship between a big city and the people that reside in it through a reflection of the 20th century, focusing on micro, and macro interactions. This course identifies the keys to urban development in relation to the society where it is produced and scrutinizes the activity of factors, agents, and collectives that participate in urban development.
