Course Description

Through a carefully selected set of practices, objects, ideas, and institutions, this course offers a broad and critical narrative of world history from the 16th to the end of the 18th century. While new links came to be forged between hitherto unconnected world regions through an increased level of travel, commerce, and colonization during this period, for many societies in the world it was also a profound experience of rupture with their traditional modes of social organization. In encouraging students to think dialectically about this complex interaction, this course provides them with a firm grounding in both empirical and conceptual literature.
