Course Description
This course offers an introduction to the creative writing process and the personal and creative challenges faced therein. The course focuses on creative self-development within an immersive context. The course encourages students' involvement with local environment as well as cooperation with local practitioners to explore topics that students find relevant to their study abroad in Prague, both academically and personally. Through writing and sharing their texts, students will gain insights into personal experience in Prague that otherwise would not have been considered, and thus develop their self-awareness and cultivate their intercultural aptitude delving deeply into their abroad experience. The course discusses authors and artists including Czech authors such as Franz Kafka, and authors who suffered from communist repression. Students reference a study of creativity and literature within the different published genres such as self-examination, memoir, biography, psychology and self-help, and associated non-literary art forms.
