Course Description
This course examines the way law interacts with society and markets in the era of globalization and the lessons that can be learned from the way that different countries choose to deal with the challenges they face in the areas of corporate, financial, commercial and business law. It looks at the historical context and the evolution of international business law and evaluates the current interaction of politics and economics with law, as well as the impact of governments and multinational corporations in the development of regulation at both national and international level. The course also covers the relationship between civil law and common law systems and their importance in 21st century business society.
