Course Description

This course reviews the great periods of Italian cinema against the backdrop of the history of Italy from the late nineteenth century to the present day. From the mute peplums to the Comédie à l'Italien, from the white telephones of the fascist period to the neo-Renaissance of the postwar period, from the economic boom to the years of lead, from the clean hands operation to today, the course analyzes more than a century of cinema history through works of fiction or documentaries. The major producers, directors, writers and actors in Italy are discussed. Works from three great directors are studied in more depth: Luchino Visconti, Federico Fellini, and Pier Paolo Pasolini. The course is given in Italian. Most of the film clips are presented in the original Italian version subtitled in French; some are in the original Italian version subtitled in Italian.
