Course Description

The course explores populist and "official" meanings and images of crimes, provide students with a basic appreciation of the differing perspectives and models used by criminologists to understand crime, and explore the influence of criminological ideas on state intervention in the criminal justice system. The course comprises a combination of weekly lectures and related seminars. The seminar, held directly after the lecture, is designed to deepen students' knowledge of the topic under discussion that week. These sessions give them the chance to develop your ideas through specific exercises and class discussion. The course also comprises a set of study skills tutorials.
