Course Description
Our world is in a state of flux: it is the dawn of the information age, the brink of the sixth mass extinction, and the era of fake-news, trash islands, AI pets, and Humans 2.0. How do we solve the problems of a future we cannot yet imagine? In the transdisciplinary Idea Translation Lab, students work collaboratively at the boundaries of art, science, design, and engineering to develop original ideas and projects where these disciplines meet. Students developentrepreneurial, creative, and critical thinking skills through collaborative group projects, and they reflect on the broader perspectives around the cultural, ethical, and economic role of science in society, including science policy and the commercialization of new ideas.
