Course Description
This course is the additional work for: PROBLEMS IN INTERNATIONAL POLITICS. Problems in International Politics can be defined as issues to be considered, tackled, or answered thanks to theories, concepts, and methods used in the discipline of International Relations. This course addresses some contemporary international problems by having a look at them through the scientific lenses provided by International Relations. Given the potentially huge domain of international issues, the topics concerned focus on international security, broadly defined, rather than international political economy.
