Course Description
The course is divided into 3 parts, and delves into the topic of cultural sociology. It begins with mapping the elusive concept of culture and engaging in both classical and contemporary sociological debates over culture. The second part examines the relations between culture and social inequalities, and the last part focuses on the role of culture in everyday lives, such as fashion and body, economic activities, and collective action. Assessment: participation and activities, positional papers, group project presentation, midterm.
