Course Description
This course discusses social change, conflict theory, theory of revolutions, and the way different social, cultural, economic, and political processes influence Latin American revolutions. The Mexican Revolution, Cuban Revolution, and Bolivarian Revolution in Venezuela are compared and contrasted in order examine the sociopolitical processes that occur within the context of an interconnected, rapidly modernizing world. The specific conditions of pre-revolutionary periods, the revolution itself, and the political evolution of the post-revolutionary phases are analyzed for each case.
