Course Description
In this course, students are introduced to management and organisation in the non-profit sector. Students examine the diversity of the non-profit sectors and types of organisations across different countries and institutional settings. Studies in this course draw on research, policy, and practice to critically explore the management challenges of non-profit organisations and new ventures, and the relation between non-profit, public, and business sectors, and civil society. Students also explore how to utilize social entrepreneurship to generate social change and impact through the creation of new ventures and mobilization of resources across organisation and sector boundaries.
