Course Description
The course starts with a general outline of the principles of property law and briefly outlines the development of Equity and the trust mechanism. The first substantive part of the course covers the creation of express trusts, including secret trusts and private purpose trusts, and legal formalities for the transfer of property. The second part of the course considers express trusts in practice, looking at the powers and duties of trustees, and then considers the role of non-express trusts in the family home and the role of statutory trusts that are imposed where there is co-ownership of land. (This is the full year long version of the course for 30 credits, LAWS10121 is fall semester only and 15 credits)
