Course Description
This course explores health and its determinants from a broad range of sociological approaches. It examines the relationship between health and the social, political, and economic organization of society, and the theoretical and empirical basis of the social context of health and health care. The course introduces students to the key debates and theories in the sociology of health and illness; provides an understanding of how these debates impact on our knowledge of health and illness; and examines the possibilities and limits of the sociology of health and illness.
