Course Description
This course covers the definition of religious fundamentalism and the history of the evolution of its different forms. The course examines both popular images of fundamentalism and the historical roots of the religions most associated with fundamentalism. Students gain knowledge about the past to better inform understanding of the present. The opposition between fundamentalism and modernization, tradition and progress, constancy and renewal, and unity and diversity is examined. This course considers the phenomenon of fundamentalism with the tools of cultural history, examining selected historical expressions of Christian, Jewish, and Islamic fundamentalism from the Enlightenment to the present day.
