Course Description

This course prepares students to be effective public speakers and critically attuned listeners. It introduces students to theories of oral communication and public speaking, as well as practical strategies for analyzing and connecting with audiences, gathering and structuring relevant information, employing effective rhetorical devices, incorporating visual aids, and delivering purposefully engaging speeches. Students practice their speaking skills and learn how to give and receive critical constructive feedback. Through experiential and reflective learning, students gain confidence in speaking in academic, professional and public settings.
