Course Description

Despite recent societal changes, people with disabilities, chronic illnesses, and/or neurodivergence are still underrepresented in society, popular culture, medical and academic disciplines. In this course, students take an autoethnographic, reflexive approach to exploring disabilities, chronic illnesses, and neurodivergence in society in general by considering representations in film, literature, and media, by studying the social barriers experienced, by learning about equality and social justice and by exploring different approaches to disability and advocacy.
