Course Description

This course provides a study of the organization and management of communication systems via their structural elements. It looks at the behavior of audiovisual markets and the impact of new information and communication technologies in these structures and systems, and in particular, audiovisual policies in Europe, Spain and Catalonia. Topics include: history and characteristics of communication systems; consolidated audiovisual institutions and industries (film, radio, television, music); new perspectives (internet and mobile communications); normative structural elements (policies, ethics, legal framework).
