Course Description

Democracy is a core concept of politics and we pretend to understand it. However, to be frank, do we really know democracy? The course focuses on some of the most important theories of democracy that have been present since the birth of the term. The goal of the course is to provide students with theoretical musculature to think further about democracy. Topics include democratic principles, right to vote, direct and formative democracy, accountability and representation, constitutionalism, and forms of democratic government.
