Course Description
From the aftermath of the Norman Conquest of England to the close of the 15th century, the history of the island of Britain centered on the development of two monarchies: the English crown and its dominions and the kingdom of Scotland. This course has at its core the relationship between the two realms and comparisons of the different but related societies they contained. Students examine the English and Scottish realms as specific examples of northern European kingdoms in the high and later Middle Ages. The course stresses their internal development and issues of national identity, but also focuses on the full range of contacts between the princes and peoples of Britain and the wider world, in particular via the Church and through extensive ties with France and the Low Countries.
