Course Description
This course addresses three key issues in the design and functioning of political institutions: the structure of and relationship between the executive, the legislative, the judiciary, and public administration and how election systems impact these institutions; the relationship between these institutions and individual and collective actors such as MPs and political parties; and the impact of institutions and actors on policy outcomes. The course focuses empirically on three areas of the world: Western Europe, the United States, and Central and Eastern Europe. Although not required, it is recommended that students have completed an introductory course in comparative politics as a prerequisite.
