Course Description

The course allows students to develop their natural gift for creative thinking. To this end, students make films of poems - film poems. These cinematic works usually exceed the likely intentions of the poet, becoming something new; one creative work is used as a springboard for another. In this course, students are shown how to make film poems using a combination of mobile phone technology and analysis of style, enabling them to produce novel cinematic interpretations of poetry. Students learn how to conduct an authoritative stylistic analysis of a poem, using this as the basis for creating a screenplay which they film on their mobile phone (or other device), editing, and enhancing through their employment of freely available apps.
