Course Description

This course examines the major problems and issues, both historiographical and historical, relating to women in 20th century Africa, including focusing on the changing status of women in Africa within the context of the efforts to extend capitalism and to democratize society across the continent. The course covers the following themes: the discourse on the impact of the emergence and operation of modern nation-states upon the status of African women; the pervasive role of traditional, Islamic and Western influences in African historical evolution tradition.
