Course Description
This course introduces students to the complexities of the Caribbean from a variety of disciplinary perspectives. The course does not attempt a comprehensive history of the region, but rather offers a nuanced interdisciplinary exploration around four key themes: plantation, carnival, piracy, and hybridity, each of which allows a window into the unique history, politics, and culture of the region. Our exploration of these themes also introduces a series of questions and topics connected to the larger issues of postcolonialism, transnationalism, and identity politics, which resonate beyond this distinctive space.
