Course Description
This course invites students to reflect on ethical questions (e.g., accountability, transparency, serving the common good vs. serving oneself) in the conduct and practices of elected officials in liberal democracies. The approach relies on a few classical texts of political science while many examples drawn from contemporary democratic politics are also examined. The overall objective of this course is to encourage students to develop their critical thinking on the nature of power and on what democratic ethics means today, with a view to the future of democracy in general and the future of the quality of democracy in particular.
