Course Description
The aims of the course are to examine philosophical thinking about the law, alongside familiarising students with the main methodological, ontological, and normative issues in the study of law and its legitimacy. The course will provide students with knowledge of some of the most influential legal and political philosophers and their theories of the state and law. The course will also encourage and enable students to think about doctrinal legal questions from a philosophical and critical perspective. To help students to develop legal reasoning skills by training them in abstract, philosophical arguments.
