Course Description
This course explores the various experiences of war of those affected in a variety of ways. It encourages reflection on the meaning and value of experience and the relevance of experience as evidence. The course looks in depth at officers in modern warfare such as Iraq and Afghanistan, leadership in the Falklands war, how wars are remembered, and the presence of war in literature as well as looking into virtual reality and artificial intelligence. This is a spring-only version of a year-long course.
