Course Description

This course looks at the construction of social classes and hierarchies throughout history as well as social inequalities related to gender. While the majority of the course emphasizes the class constructions and social inequalities that exist in France, it also takes into consideration the similarities to and differences from those of other countries, in particular those of the United States. In addition, it seeks to understand how social hierarchies have been defined and categorized throughout history. Specifically, the course analyzes the works Tocqueville, Weber, Marx, and Bourdieu.
