Course Description
This course provides perspective on the many emerging challenges facing business and modern society as we look towards a future characterized by limited resources, growing populations, shifting climates, and constantly changing economic, technological, and political structures. As most major international reports on the state of the world agree, "business as usual" will likely compound these problems rather than alleviate them. This course explores possible options that could be applied to create more adaptive arrangements for future thriving. The course models these shifts by challenging students to create the vision, commitment, and practical thinking necessary to contribute to a progressive world.
