Course Description
This course introduces sociolinguistics and looks at the approaches to analysing language in relations to many different social variables such as class, gender, or social distance. Students explore sociolinguistic frameworks, methods, and concepts, and learn how to communicate linguistic ideas, principles, and theories by written, oral, and visual means. Topics include dialectology, code-switching, genderlects, language policy, multilingualism, and interpersonal dynamics. By looking at the different methods and types of evidence used by sociolinguists, students are exposed to the different ways of working in this subject.
