Course Description

This course encompasses more complex structures and communicative competences in the German language. Students gain the ability to express desires and intentions as well as temporal sequences. They solidify their ability to communicate in every-day situations such as searching for housing, travel, general orientation, and relationships. The course also features more demanding texts for listening and reading comprehension. Students distill socio-cultural information from authentic texts such as newspaper articles and short literary extracts. In the realm of writing, the composition of basic types of texts is pursued. This course is at the A2.2/B1.1 level according to CFER.
