Course Description

The purpose of this course is to provide students with the basic concepts and theories of human behavior in an organization. This course deals with how people in an organization perceive, feel, and behave as individuals, and in the process of interacting with others in the organization. Lectures are largely divided into three parts: individual level, group level, and organizational level. (1) At the individual level, it deals with personality, values, attitudes, perceptions, and motivations; (2) at the group level, it deals with groups, teams, communications, conflicts, and leadership, which are collective behaviors formed by the interactions of individuals in the organization. (3) At the organizational level, we will examine organizational structure, organizational culture, etc.
