Course Description

Maori have always been scientists and this science enabled them to adapt to, survive and thrive in the landscape of Aotearoa. This course examines how, by looking at matakā and pūtaiao Maori (Maori knowledge and science) in both traditional and contemporary contexts. It examines the differences and similarities between Western and Maori ways of knowing. Workshops and field trips on topics such as hangarau (technology) and rongoa (medicine) allow students to engage with matakā and pūtaiao in practical ways.
