Course Description
This course traces history's history in Britain and Ireland through a variety of avenues. The careers and works of the great representatives of both countries - Macaulay, Carlyle and Froude Stubbs, Acton, Maitland, and Gardiner in England, and Taaffe, Ferguson, Pendergast, Lecky, Gilbert, Bagwell, Orpen, and McNeill in Ireland are examined. The structures and contexts of research, teaching, and publication is explored. And a critical analysis of the great themes of the leading historical works - the Norman Conquest, the Reformation, Cromwell, Empire, and the running sore of Ireland - reveal the degree to which contemporary ideological preoccupations influenced supposedly detached historical interpretations.
