Course Description
This course focuses on the work of major figures within the analytic tradition, including Bertrand Russell, G.E. Moore, A.J. Ayer, Rudolf Carnap, and W.V. Quine. The course examines how these philosophers have differed on a number of central issues, including a priori knowledge, the status of metaphysics, the role of philosophy, and the relationship between philosophy and science. The course considers the status of philosophy of language and metaphysics within the analytic tradition, and the purpose of philosophical theorizing. The course covers influential work within the analytic tradition from the 20th century, including that of Ludwig Wittgenstein, Ordinary Language Philosophy, Saul Kripke, and the revival of metaphysics.
