Course Description
How are human beings and plants interdependent? How did plants shape the planet Earth to one that is suitable for life as we know it? Such topics are examined to deepen appreciation of the roles played by plants in the progress of civilizations and cultures from both historic perspective and continuing impact on society. The discussion topics, written and oral presentations include plants as sources of food, clothing, shelter, medicine. There are talks by guests from local industry, along with team projects to enrich awareness of the deep coexistence of plants and society.
