Course Description
This course examines basic concepts of the gender order of masculinities and femininities, sexualities, and more, both in the Central European region and more globally. It also strives to sensitize students to gender as well as equip them with means of analysis of the gender order and culture in a transnational perspective. By combining these two approaches students examine past and present gender regimes in the region. Students detect and analyze gender relevant issues and pay special attention to the period and place concerned. The course helps students identify dominant gender ideologies, stereotypes, and myths, and locate different social institutions and processes such as family, work place, labor market, and politics, that continue to perpetuate gender inequalities of various degrees across the globe. Topics include the definitions of gender, the public/private divide, the role of the media and representation in the perpetuation/change of gender roles, sexuality and sexual politics, and gender order under state socialism and its impact.
