Course Description

This course reviews various systemic theories and topics relevant to marriage and family life. Focus is given to the theoretical understanding of family relationships across the stages of the family life cycle and related stressors and developmental implications of each stage. Students will be invited to study their own family history, timeline and genogram as a way to gain insights about their unique individual family process. Topics: the family system and major characteristics; the major developmental issues of each life cycle stage and transitional stress accompanying changes in the family system; the interaction effects of life cycle changes within the family system; the role of cultural/ethnic differences and their impact on family life.
