Course Description
This course concentrates on the ethnographic study of Japanese popular culture. Relevant concepts, theories, analytical perspectives and approaches to the sociocultural meanings of popular expressive behaviors in Japan are introduced in reference with prominent case studies. Backgrounds in anthropology and sociology in general, and specifically ethnography and/or qualitative research methods, are useful, but are not required. The course examines such topics as popular artistry, entertainment business and media industry with a greater understanding of the sociocultural significance.
