Course Description
Spain and Portugal experienced the longest lasting dictatorships of the 20th century in Western Europe. This course adopts a thematic and comparative approach to the histories of Portugal and Spain under the Franco and Salazar regimes. The approach is comparative and the Iberian experience is framed with reference to both the European contexts of interwar and post-war Europe, and to the global politics of international fascism, empire, and the Cold War from the 1930s to the mid 1970s. Social and political life in the period is explored through a diverse range of contemporary sources and perspectives. The course also considers current historiographical, political, and social science literatures and debates.
