Course Description

This is an interdisciplinary class on the relationship between the EU and Japan, focusing on economic aspects but also including political and social aspects. The course comprehensively deals with the history from the beginning of European integration to the establishment of the euro, and the relationship between the EU and Japan and other countries during that process.

In each lecture, Power point will be prepared and uploaded before the lecture. In addition, we rely on the reference books such as 'EU-Japan relations and the crisis of multilateralism' and 'Routledge handbook of the economics of European integration' for which e-books are available at Keio library and are useful for you to study at home. Students are supposed to submit short comments after every class. European policy makers and academics will be invited for guest speeches occasionally.
