Course Description

This course is part of the Laurea Magistrale program and is intended for advanced level students. Enrolment is by consent of the instructor. At the end of the course the student has a sound knowledge of the financial products traded in the market, the differences among them, and the reasons why they were introduced in the market. The products range from standard bonds and stocks to derivatives and structured finance products. The student examines the main agents trading in the market, as fund raisers or investors, as well as financial intermediaries. The course starts by illustrating the role that financial markets play in the economy. Students are introduced to the key finance concepts of time value of money and no-arbitrage valuation. These concepts are applied to the valuation of two asset classes: fixed-income securities and financial derivatives.
