Course Description

This course furnishes the necessary elements for understanding cities and their development. It delineates the diverse aspects of cities and the large phases in urban spaces and societies. This includes the origins of cities and the large cycles of urbanization up until recent turns (nineteenth and twentieth centuries). This includes both physical aspects as well as social ones. This course focuses on: archeology and ancient cities in Mesopotamia and Mediterranean; the cities from the middle age until the eighteenth century, including colonialism; the nineteenth century and industrialization; housing and urban development.
