Course Description
The 16th century was a period of dramatic technological change. New discoveries in geography, astronomy, and science radically altered the understanding of the universe, the race, and the individual. New technologies transformed the way in which people made sense of the world and of each other. This course examines the major territorial and technological discoveries of the 16th century, and explores the ways in which the discourse of discovery shaped the literature of the English renaissance. Each lecture in the course focuses on a specific area of discovery and innovation during the early modern period.
